Membership Info

The Concrete Industry Board of New York is a non-profit organization founded in 1951 to bring together all sectors of the concrete industry for the purpose of improving quality from design through construction. CIB is the NYC Chapter of the American Concrete Institute. The CIB's goals are:

- To foster the development of quality concrete through technical education
- To assist the transformation of good design into good concrete structures.
- To distribute pertinent information provided by the ACI, CRSI, ASTM, and other organizations relative to design criteria, materials, testing procedures and construction practices together with regulations which will foster plain and reinforced concrete of the highest quality.
- To correlate all segments of the industry .

Organization

The CIB is governed by an Executive Board , composed of the President, Vice Presidents, Secretary, Treasurer, and the immediate Past President, as well as a Board of Directors representing of all major sectors of the industry.

Membership

The CIB is composed of professional firms, corporations, organizations and individuals concerned with the construction, design, teaching, testing, production, and materials supply of plain or reinforced concrete, precast prestressed, or cast-in-place or its component parts including aggregates, cement, admixtures, reinforcing steel, bar supports and wire mesh.

All members of the CIB pledge that they will perform quality concrete work and comply with all the requirements of codes, plans, and specifications.

Activities

The following programs support the CIB's goal of quality concrete.

- A program of regular meetings, and educational seminars addressing topical aspects of design and construction to members and non-members up to date on industry activities.
- The CIB conducts on a regular basis several ACI classes for the five boroughs and Westchester County. The CIB was instrumental in making ACI Certification an agency code requirement.
- An Awards Dinner is held in November each year to honor completed structures which represent excellence in concrete in their architectural and, engineering design, general construction and workmanship.
- The CIB's Technical Committees include standing committees and those organized to meet a particular need. Over the years the committees have earned a reputation for their contributions toward building code revisions, rules and regulations to supplement code requirements, and the preparation of manuals to set forth recommended practices. As an organization, CIB has been able to call on a pool of professionals to serve on its various committees.
